

Electronic Payments and Privacy

If you choose to pay by electronic services, your name, payment and method of payment may appear in the records of the financial institutions that process these transactions. While I control access to my business financial records, I cannot control or manage how banks and independent payment processors handle internal access to the transaction information they maintain within their systems.

By permitting the use of electronic services and payment methods, you acknowledge and accept the associated privacy limitations and risks regarding how your identifying information may appear in any records of independent financial processors. Unless you inform me that you do not wish to use these electronic payment options, your use of them will be treated as your consent to the payment- related disclosures described above.
